Claim dismissed over alleged COVID-19 permanent disability.

Workers' Compensation
December 2, 2021

Our attorneys were successful in obtaining an order for dismissal in the Mount Holly, New Jersey Workers' Compensation court. In his claim petition, the petitioner alleged permanent disability as a result of contracting COVID-19 while working for the insured. He alleged that while working as an auto hauler he was exposed to COVID-19, which resulted in a permanent pulmonary disability. The defense argued to the judge that the petitioner's discovery failed to provide sufficient proof and evidence supporting that the petitioner had COVID-19 or that, if he did, it was "related to his job."
